About the Survey

In 2021, Herstory contracted L&G Research and Evaluation Consulting Inc. to assess the impact of its writers' workshops in the following areas:

- Community and Civic Engagement
- Enhancement of Empathy and Understanding of the “Other”
- Deeper Learning and Understanding of Social Issues
- Finding an Effective Voice, Skills for Expression, and Improvement in Narrative Techniques
- Engagement with Writing and Literature
- Healing
- Courage and Leadership
- Lasting Connections
- Participant Satisfaction

The survey was disseminated electronically via Herstory’s Constant Contact email list and was open to anyone who had participated in a Herstory workshop in the past 25 years. 49 responses were collected from 11/21/21 – 12/4/21. This report includes the analyzed results.

Please tell us what we can do to improve the workshop experience.

- “Maybe have groups participate in ice breakers or trust building activities before jumping right into sharing potentially very personal and vulnerable stories.”
- “More concrete political action/awareness.”
- “Please offer some more workshops specifically for elders and LGBT folks.”
- “Facilitators with higher energy, more willing to really critique, more mature people able to analyze the work of older persons.”
- “More locations/workshops.”
- “I can’t think of anything! The workshop is amazing as is.”
- “Should this stay on Zoom, maybe make it mandatory for students and participants to have their cameras on.”
- “Helps in improving your writing and communication skills as an individual.”
- “Making any necessary resources more accessible would help to improve the workshop experience.”
- “Seems fine to me if you are a SBU student and want an engaging way to earn your EXP+ credit and enjoy writing.”
- “Keep up the great work! This workshop was very well managed and was a rewarding experience for me.”
- “Expand to other areas of injustice.”
- “I had a really good time; there’s nothing that needs improvement.”
- “Keep up the good work. I’ll definitely be back soon!”
- “I do wish I would have stayed connected with some of the people I met. It would have been great to be part of a Slack/WhatsApp/Google group with people.”

<td>“I like how it is. I feel safe to share very deep painful feelings. When it’s the first time telling a story that I have kept secret for all of my life, safety is required for me to even thin about putting it on paper, never mind reading it out loud. The personal is the political but it starts with feeling safe enough to move to the next level. If I feel pushed to share when it doesn’t feel safe, I won’t come back. Or I’d connect with the leaders. It’s not a therapy session, but it’s definitely therapeutic. It’s definitely helping me learn to write better – awesome feedback that is hard to find elsewhere from leaders and cohort. I would miss this group so much if it went away. The world needs to hear our stories. But first we have to be able to speak them in a small safe place. There is not a safe place to write like this and feel heard and accepted anywhere else.”</td>
